What can musicians, Higher Music Education and other institutions within the sector do today to deal with growing environmental issues and raising ecological awareness?

This presentation will highlight some inspiring green music practices all whilst paying particular attention to the SHIFT eco-guidelines for cultural networks and other eco-certification programs created. We would like to initiate a dialogue on how AEC and HME institutions can work together, support and inspire each other to go green. To that end, participants will be invited to be part of the AEC's Goes Green initiative through the sharing of their ideas, practices, and needs in order to make their work and the entire sector more sustainable.

The session will be led by members of the AEC Goes Green Working Group, which operates within the AEC – Empowering Artists as Makers in Society (ARTEMIS) project. Maria Hansen (ELIA) will present the eco-certification programmes, and Julie Nguyen, Alma Chaumeille and Margaux Dauby, students at CNSMD Lyon, will present possible sustainable initiatives for their institution.
